July 12, 2018

Tutor.com, a professional tutoring service by The Princeton Review, is now available to all library members at the Boca Raton Public Library for free, reported Boca Club News.

Students are able to access thousands of educational resources and special tutoring features on a number of different subjects such as math, science, English, and more.

"A library card is more valuable than ever!" said Boca Club News. According to their publication:

Thanks to a generous donation from the Friends of the Boca Raton Public Library, K-12 students now have free access to one-to-one help from professional tutors from the Tutor.com Learning Suite, an online service from The Princeton Review. "Through the Friends' gift, the Library will be able to respond to the community's need for homework help on a large number of topics for students with different needs,” said Ann Nappa, Library Manager. “This enables all Boca Raton student library users to work with a personal tutor at no cost to them, and at their convenience online.”

“Through Tutor.com, students will get help with skills and concept they are learning in class or as homeschoolers, as well as Advanced Placement® and college entrance exams,” said Vicky Fitzsimmons, Digital Librarian. “Subjects include math, science, English, Spanish, social studies, ACT®/SAT and writing. Through Princeton Review’s SAT/ACT Essentials self-study modules, they can access full-length practice tests, a diagnostic score report, supporting video lessons and practice drills, and college application advice. Live tutoring and drop-off services are available in English or Spanish.”

Other special features of Tutor.com include:
