NYTimes Digital – Getting Started Guide

How do I get unlimited access to nytimes.com if I'm in the library?
If you are using one of the library's public computers or are connected to the library's wi-fi, you can go directly to www.nytimes.com and start reading.

How do I get unlimited access if I'm not in the library?
You will need an access code, which you will find here. You can also pick up a print copy of this page from the Information Desk when you visit the library. Once you have the code, go to http://www.nytimes.com/redeemaccess and enter it.

You'll need to create an account with the NY Times. Register with your personal email address*, or click on "log in here" if you have already created an account. To protect your privacy, we recommend that you do not use the Facebook and Google login methods.

Once you have created your account (or have logged in), you will receive an email confirmation of your 3-day, unlimited access to New York Times Digital. If you did not receive this confirmation email, please review the above instructions to ensure that you have completed each step.

*Please be advised that registering an email address with New York Times Digital will opt you into receiving email marketing communications from the New York Times. To opt out of receiving mailings, follow the unsubscribe instructions at the bottom of these messages.

How is accessing the NYTimes through the BRPL or with a remote pass any different from going directly to NYTimes.com?
Without a paid subscription or remote pass, nonsubscribers can access only 10 free articles (including blog posts, slide shows, videos and other multimedia features) each calendar month on NYTimes.com.

Once I have redeemed my pass, can I go straight to www.nytimes.com, or do I have to go through the library's website?
During your 3-day access, you can go directly to www.nytimes.com , but you'll need to enter the user name (email address) and password you created.

Can I activate a new pass before my current one expires?
No. Each NYTimes.com pass grants 3-days of access. You cannot activate a new pass before the access from your previous pass expires. To activate a new remote pass, return to www.nytimes.com/redeemaccess and enter the same code. Your expiration time will be displayed when you activate your pass.

Is there a limit to how many times I can use a 3-day pass?
No, there is no limit to the number of 3-day passes you can use.

I've already registered. How do I log on?

If you've already registered, just enter your ID and password at www.NYTimes.com/login. If you've forgotten your ID or password, please use the password reset tool.

Using New York Times Digital App
The New York Times Digital app is free and available for the following operating systems:

- Android
- iOS
- Fire tablets

If you're using a mobile device, open your device's browser to the New York Times page with the redeem access link to get the access code, not the New York Times app itself. Then, once you launch the NYT app and sign in with the email address you used to register, the code will have already been applied.

I have activated a remote pass – what do I get?
The BRPL's subscription allows NYTimes.com access from any PC + access via apps for iPhone, BlackBerry 10, Windows Phone 7+ and Android-powered phones.

Do I still have unlimited access if I log out of my NYTimes.com account?
During your period of unlimited access, you must be logged in to the NYTimes.com account with which you activated your pass. If you log out of your account or visit NYTimes.com on a device where you are not logged in, you can simply log in to your account to continue enjoying unlimited access.

How do I access NYTimes.com if I already have a paid account?
If you already pay for a NYTimes.com subscription, you will need to create another account to access your Boca Raton Public Library pass. Follow the instructions above using a different email address than the one used for your existing NYTimes.com account.

Can I access back issues of the NYTimes?
Yes, you have access to the past 7 days of the NYTimes, provided you are on a PC or using the NYTimes App on one of these devices: iPhone, BlackBerry 10, Windows Phone 7+ and Android-powered phones. From a PC/Mac, click on "Today's Paper" at the top of the page. Next, click on the "try now" button. From here you can navigate to the date you wish to view. From a SmartPhone app, back issues cannot be viewed in their entirety. You must use the search box to retrieve individual articles. Results from the past 7 days will be displayed.

Can I access historical archives?
Yes. All NYTimes.com Pass users have unlimited access to the New York Times archived articles outside the 1923–1980 date range. Users may access up to five free articles daily, published between the years 1923 through 1980. NYTimes apps are not supported on all devices. Passes do not include e-reader editions, Times Premier content or digital versions of The New York Times Crossword.
